Yet more places to eat and drink: 70 bars and restaurants open now

Steve Dinneen

It's just days until we can once more sit in a restaurant and dine like civilized human beings, albeit socially distanced ones. But where to book? To help you make this most difficult of decisions, we've collected a bumper list of 70 places to meet up with friends and support the hospitality industry.

Central London

Home House

Members' Club Home House has reopened its garden space, a quiet oasis in the centre of Marylebone. Open for a leisurely business breakfast, an afternoon rendezvous or a long awaited dinner. The extravagant Raj Tent lies the heart of the garden, ensuring warmth and comfort one frostier days. Members and guests can enjoy the quintessentially British garden menu or a gourmet barbecue. Rail House Cafe

With a covered and heated terrace, Victoria's Rail House Cafe is the perfect place for groups of up to six to meet for drinks and dining. Seating 120, you'll be able to enjoy all-day menus and weekend Brunch. Sister restaurant Riding House Cafe on Great Titchfield Street will also be reopening on April 12th, with a covered outdoor terrace. Book here.

28-50 Wine Bar & Kitchen

Independent wine specialists 28-50 Wine Bar & Kitchen Covent Garden and its sister Wine Workshop & Kitchen Marylebone will open up both terraces for outdoor dining, with chef Julien Baris offering a host of new seasonal dishes. Highlights from the new menu include freshly caught seafood platters, which pair perfectly with 28-50's varied wine-list. Book here.
