YOUR WEEKLY GUIDE TO LONDON LIFE, COURTESY OF METRO

Who's your daddy? It's not a real question. We're not getting all EastEnders on you on the subject of your paternity or anything like that. We're just here to remind you — organised person that you are — that Father's Day is on the horizon (June 20, thanks for asking, so Sunday week) and you really can't get away with handkerchiefs again. Basically because not even dads use them. So how about a hamper? A spot of cricket over lunch? Big screen footy? Fine wining and dining? Tickets to a beer festival, perhaps? An interactive crime caper? A flying trapeze lesson, for goodness sake! You really have no excuse, not once you've read this little lot.

28°-50° Wine Workshop & Kitchen

Thinks he knows something about wine, does he, your dad? Does that nose-in-the-glass thing and the swilling-around thing? Well then, this Father's Day why not treat him to some fine bistro-style food and most excellent wines at the newly opened 28°-50° Wine Workshop & Kitchen Chelsea? Not a single reason we can think of. The building is an old Victorian bank and the wine list award-winning, featuring old and new world wines plus some from their very own vineyard in the French Alps. There's nothing these people won't be able to tell him about wines. Nothing! Which is unsurprising, really, given they clearly know their stuff, having named their restaurant after the latitudes between which wine-producing grapes are grown. Clever clogs!
