YOUR WEEKLY GUIDE TO LONDON LIFE, COURTESY OF METRO

Kids today, eh? They don't know they're born. Not with the sort of half-term treats that are on offer next week. Like free tickets up the amazing ArcelorMittal Orbit, that big read squiggle in Stratford. And dessert masterclasses and film clubs and immersive games. But it's not all about them (try telling them that!), there's also a fondue festival, a hot new Indian takeaway that comes highly recommended and a pop-up vegan pizza joint in Soho. Fight it out among yourselves!

Unbelievable

Fondue Festival

The best part of skiing is clearly the fondue and drinks afterwards. Even Olympic skiers know that. Now, you can have all the drippy cheese and booze you want without having to lug those ugly snow boots up and down slippery pathways to lifts at the South Kensington Fondue Festival put together by independent wine specialists 28-50. Dip your bread in a variety of fondues (apparently, it's a thing that if you drop your bread you have to take your clothes off. Just sayin') while you sample wines from the Alpine region of Savoie in a three-course deal with charcuterie, walnut salad and dessert all for £39.95. We don't mind if we do.

Tuesdays (booking essential), 28-50 South Kensington, 96 Draycott Avenue, SW3
