

France's ski season is back in full force

And there are agent incentives available to snap up, to help sell holidays for this ski season and for next winter in France.

Since France lifted its temporary travel ban for UK tourists last week, travel companies have reported skyrocketing bookings there. 12 per cent of Brits are now planning a holiday to France, according to a survey by travel insurance brand battleface.

easyJet also saw a 600 per cent rise in last-minute UK flight bookings to French ski resort destinations following the announcement.

Here are some of the new openings, experiences and incentives to make use of this ski season in the French Alps.

Socially distanced catering at 50 chalets

- Ski France has come up with a new contactless catering concept for guests staying at over 50 chalets in Val d'Isère, Tignes, Méribel, Courchevel, and La Plagne. Guests will arrive to find local produce for breakfast, afternoon tea, snacks and a three-course dinner and drinks each day.
