

Back on track: a guide to this winter's ski season

After some disappointing seasons, resorts have made preparations, travel restrictions are easing and skiers, as ever, are eager for action.

Chalet rules

British operator Ski France has seen a positive response to its new Catered Contactless Chalets. “They have claimed almost 60% of new bookings, whereas chalets were previously only a quarter of our winter sales,” says co-owner Joanna Laforge. “It certainly seems that guests appreciate their own space and not having to interact with strangers.”

The chalets come stocked with food to prepare provided recipes, and there are also some delicatessen dishes and plenty of wine and beer, with staff popping in mid-week to clean and re-stock.
