Looking for a hearty meal with some live entertainment on the side? Look no further. These London restaurants with live music are perfect, no matter what kind of groove you're into.

We can't think of a pairing more iconic than food and music – well, perhaps cheese and wine, but we happen to think smooth jazz goes pretty well with that, too.

Luckily, plenty of London's restaurants have got the memo and many of them host live music evenings so that you can enjoy your dinner with a backdrop of tunes. Toe-tapping is 100% guaranteed.

London's music scene has something for everyone and every occasion – so we've written this guide to the top restaurants with live music and dinner London has to offer. You're welcome.

Best Restaurants with Live Music in London

28° -50° by Night

Marylebone

Marylebone

Head over to Marylebone and you'll discover a hidden London gem. It's an intimate jazz club that leans hard on the roaring 20s vibes and underground New Orleans atmosphere. It's 28° -50° by Night.

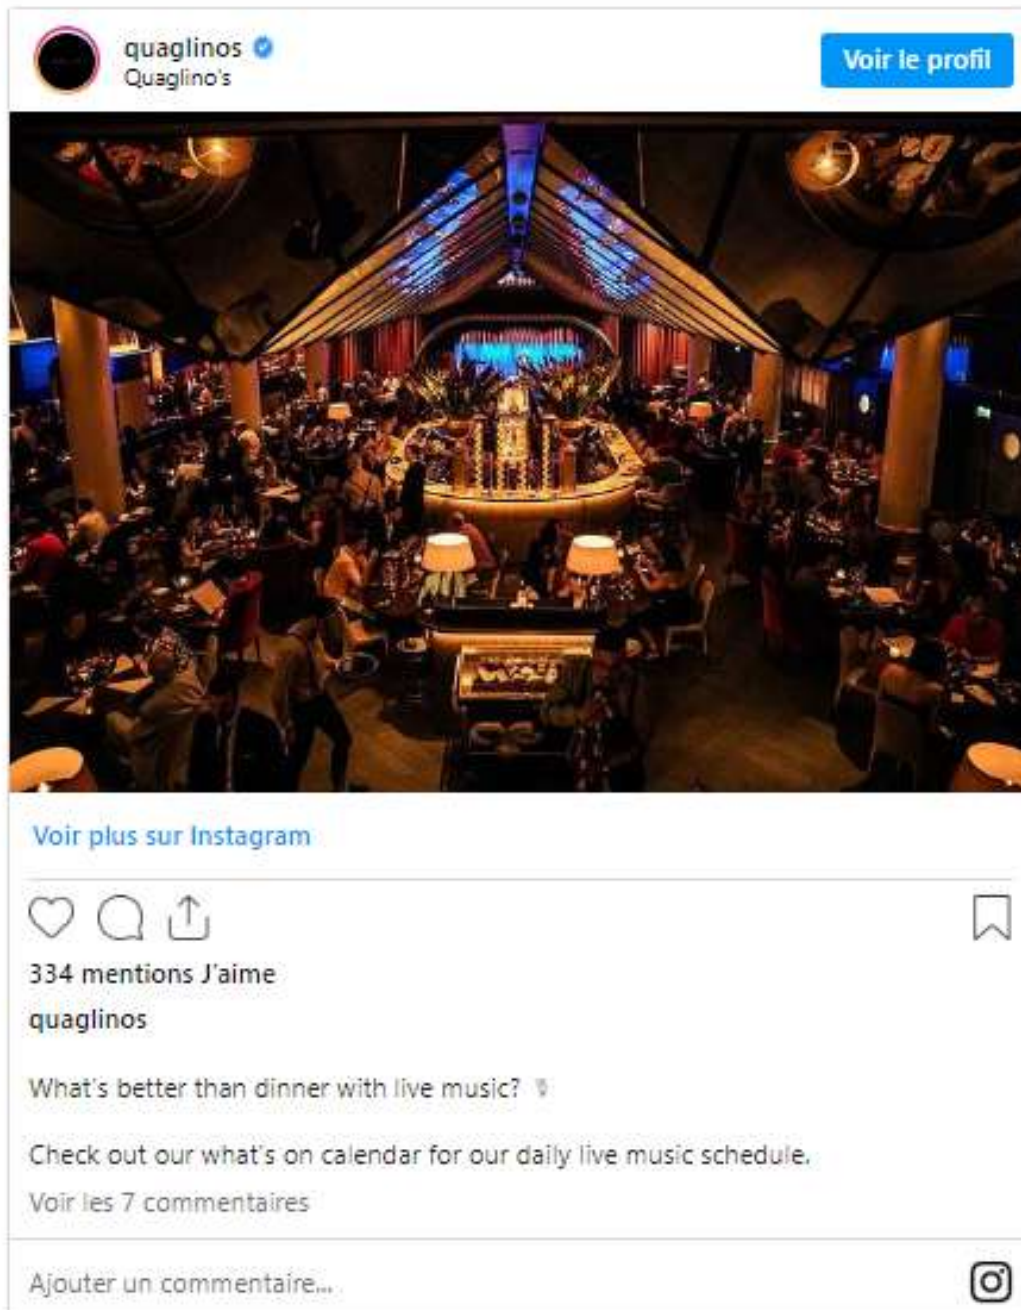

They run a raucously good time of a dinner service with live jazz, soul, and blues played by London's top musicians from Tuesday to Saturday, 8pm until 2am – no wonder then they're considered one of London's best jazz clubs.

As for the food: the kitchen stays open until midnight so you can make the most of selections of light bites or heartier mains well into the early hours (Seared Tuna with Shiitake Mushrooms for us please).

Naturally all this should be paired with a recommendation from their house sommelier – would you expect anything less than a mouthwatering collection of wines from a classy joint like this?

Quaglino's

St James

This upmarket restaurant offers dinner with live music in London, St. James. Quaglino's is open seven days a week and it's the perfect spot in the city for great food and entertainment.

Quaglino's serves a European-inspired menu that takes heavy inspiration from the flavours and techniques from contemporary cooking.
